

The view from Red Rock

Ravenswood Park

Why we love it: 600 acres of cool woods and carriage trails. Fern gullies, magnolia swamps, & harbor overlooks. Visitor center, Cross-country skiing.

Parking: Route 127 / Western Ave
TheTrustees.org

Red Rock

Why we love it: Stunning, lofty views of Cape Ann. Huge granite outcroppings. Cliff face excellent for practicing rope climbing skills, easier trails to right of rock. Short, sometimes steep hike.

Parking: Rt. 133 at exit 14

Dogtown & Babson Boulder Trail

Why we love it: Huge granite boulders and dense woods. Cellar holes from pre-Revolutionary War settlement. Lowbush blueberries in midsummer. Some 30 boulders are inscribed with inspirational phrases. Hike for an hour or all day on multiple trails.

Take a map (available at local bookstores); trails are confusing. Dogs welcome. Mountain biking, Geocaching.

Parking: off Cherry St, Gee Ave.

Maritime Heritage Trail

Why we love it:

Easy downtown trail with gorgeous views of Gloucester Harbor, working waterfront, islands and lighthouse, Fishermen's Memorial and Fisherman's Wife statues, seabirds, beaches. Maps at Stage Fort Park. Dogs must be leashed.

Parking: On street, at Stage Fort Park (fee)

Lobster Cove

The island that Gloucester and Rockport share is all about neighborhoods, and residents are more apt to tell you the neighborhood they live in rather than an address.

After all, who wouldn't want to live in Folly, Lobster, or Kettle Cove? Magnolia, Annisquam, Bass Rocks, and the Fort are just a few of our other interesting neighborhood names.

Gloucester's Infamous Sea Serpent

Since 1639 there have been scattered sightings of a brown creature 100' long, with a body like a "string of casks" and the head of a horse. In 1817, hundreds saw it swimming in Gloucester harbor, snacking on herring. There have been scattered sightings since 1818, though it has never been properly identified.
